CONSERVATIVES UNITE!

It's way past time for me to write something. Actually I've written a pile of pages. It's time for me to actually pull the trigger and send something.

Procrastination? Or ... ?

I have two major accomplishments since last spring. First was the completion of a yacht-tender with Max. It is sometimes called a dinghy. Looks good.

Second was completion of a well-pump house on Veteran's Day. Max helped me finish that project as well. There was more heavy work involved than I expected. It was just one of a number "remember that you're not 85 anymore" projects.

You can do a lot of thinking while working with your hands — and back. I merely list a few of my thoughts to leave room for readers to fill in the missing parts.

I am surprised to announce that I am a conservative. Color me on the side of caution.

For instance I think we ought to agree that perhaps the 98% of scientists might actually be right about climate change and that humans are a part of the problem. Better be safe than sorry.

I agree that it would be better to prevent unwanted pregnancies than to make abortion illegal. So I send a check to Planned Parenthood to continue their many contributions to reproductive health. Just my conservative view.

I propose that before anyone is allowed to participate in a public demonstration for or against any cause they should produce proof that they voted or are registered to vote. I asked,
How many people actually voted in 2016?

“As a percentage of eligible voters, Clinton received 28.43% (65,845,063) of all votes compared to Trump's 27.20% (62,980,160) and Did Not Vote's 44.37% (102,731,399).”

My conservative idea is that if you don't vote you can't demonstrate.

Also, if having everyone armed with weapons is actually necessary for safety and protection what right does anyone have to tell an unstable dictator in North Korea he can't have a nuclear weapon too? On the other hand my conservative position is that the NRA mentality should not set the standard for our domestic policy or our foreign policy.

Finally I think we should re-affirm our Founder's position on the separation of church and state. Too many appointments in national office are dominated by conservative Christians. I do not think an Islamic State is good. I do not think a Christian State is good either. I'm conservative.

Maybe I should go back to building a boat...or a well-pump house.

For the Moment...
